INTRODUCTION

RESEARCHERS: Please read the following introduction before using this index of the 1872 Atlas Map of Jersey County, Illinois, which was published by Andreas, Lyter, & Co. in 1872.

Researchers should be aware the 1872 Atlas Map of Jersey County, Illinois contains a combination of text, drawings of individual homesteads, and towns and township plat maps. This index has been divided into two parts to aid researchers in its use.

PART I is the complete index of the text, drawings, and maps. Every name listed in the 1872 Atlas Map of Jersey County, Illinois will be found in this section. There are names in PART I which are not found in PART II; however, all names in PART II will be found in PART I. Researchers should check PART I first.

PART II contains an index for each of the fifteen pages which contains maps. PLEASE NOTE that some pages contain more than one individual town and/or township map. When PART I states that a particular name will be found on a page containing a map(s), the researcher should then turn to PART II and check the index of that page. To help researchers locate the name, the landowner's name has been matched to the section number where that name may be found on the map.

Researchers should take particular care when searching for names listed in PART II. The printing on the maps is difficult, and often impossible, to read. Certain letters, when handwritten, are easy to mistake for another letter.

For example: the letters - a, o, and u - look alike. As do:

H, W, A, and M;
l, t, and b;
d, cl, and el;
E and F;
f and t; and,
J., T., and L.

Initials were used whenever map space was limited. Every effort has been made to match initials to the given names and surnames of landowners; however, it was not always possible to do so.

INTRODUCTION (continued)

Researchers should also be aware that the individual given names were often shorten to save space on the maps. The following is a partial list of abbreviations and their corresponding given name:
